

PAS5130 : Diagnostic Methods

Interpretation of electrocardiography and radiologic imaging is essential in the diagnosis and treatment of patients across the life span. Students recognize medical disease processes using a systematic approach to electrocardiogram (EKG) analysis and selection of imaging modalities. Students also interpret EKGs and radiologic diagnostic testing through case-based methodology.

Credits 4.0

Prerequisites

Successful completion of coursework in preceding academic quarter

Corequisites

None