

SOC1001 : Introduction to Sociology

This course introduces the study of human social development and social organizations and social institutions. Students will apply sociological perspectives to examine topics such as the development of self-concept, group dynamics, social deviance, gender equality, social class, racial and ethnic relations, demography and population, the family, religion, and education.

Credits 4.0

Prerequisites

ENG1100: Composition I

Corequisites

None