

AHS1086 : Cardiovascular and Respiratory Systems

This course covers the structural organization and the major organs of the human cardiac and respiratory systems. The normal function of each system, diseases and disorders related to each system, and pertinent diagnostic and treatment protocols will also be covered. Upon completion, students will understand gross anatomy of these systems, manifestations of diseases and disorders relative to these systems, diagnostic tests and treatment modalities.

Credits 4.0

Prerequisites

AHS1001 with a C or better

Corequisites

None