

CRJ2300 : Introduction to Corrections

This course provides a broad examination of the American correctional system. The course considers the purposes of punishment and examines correctional facilities as well as community-based corrections. The student will examine the challenges related to operating a facility, including respecting the rights of inmates while ensuring safety and security. The course concludes with a review of key contemporary issues, including the death penalty.

Credits 4.0

Prerequisites

CRJ1001: Introduction to Criminal Justice System

Corequisites

None