MCJ5100 : Advanced Research Methods and Analysis I

This course will provide an overview of research methods and data analysis in criminal justice and will focus on both quantitative and qualitative methods of research. This course will cover several topics including approaches to theory and method, research ethics, research design, descriptive statistics, sampling, survey research methods, as well as participant observation and case studies. This course will introduce the student to the application of Minitab statistical software.

Credits 4.0
Prerequisites
Undergraduate course in Statistics or equivalent
Corequisites
None